prejudice had been shown by some of the grand jurors the indictments should be set aside. If only one grand juror was diqualified that was enough to invalidate the proceedings of the whole. Attorney Campbell replied for the prosecution and argued that by the decision of the Supreme Court in the Northey case it was held that the dis-qualification of a grand juror was not a ground for setting aside an indict-ment. It was only necessary that a ground for setting aside an indict-ment. It was only necessary that there should be twelve jurors voting on an indictment who were not biased or prejudiced. George A. Newhall was recalled and testified that he did not vote on the indictments and was only present at one meeting when the indictments were under consideration.

early converts to the cause of Zion-ism came up yesterday in Judge Mu-rasky's court, when John Alexander Dowie was ordered to pay to Hugh Craig the sum of $2727 36. Craig alleged that the money was due him for many services rendered to Dowie during his first lecture tour to the coast. Craig at that time ad-vanced the money to Dowie to cover the expenses of his tour and consid-ered it as lost when the tour failed. A few years later Dowie made a
